

Today is your lucky day! Your long lost Aunt (me) has written you a letter containing 30 lessons you didn't learn in school, lessons she feels certain will help you to lead a happier, healthier, and more successful life. Suspend your disbelief - the fact I am not your genetically-related aunt, matters not. The Information Age has transcended these kinds of shallow and superfluous boundaries. I have adopted you, for all intents and purposes, and become your loving E-Auntie. I decided to write this letter to you because after years of running my own businesses, I've seen first-hand that intelligent young people lack important knowledge. I myself, used to be part of this camp. I was extremely educated but clueless about life! I studied for years at top universities and learned many valuable things, but I have to say, the car business is what really prepared me to be successful in real life. I love that line in Ghostbusters when Dr. Stanz says, Personally, I liked the university. They gave us money and facilities, we didn't have to produce anything! You've never been out of college! You don't know what it's like out there! I've *worked* in the private sector. They expect *results*. Why are you ill prepared for life? Why is it that schools and parents with the best of intentions can't seem to figure out what it is you need to know or whose responsibility it is to teach it to you? The entrepreneurship coursing through my veins has little patience for psychoanalysis or trying to figure out the myriad causes of the problem. Instead, I want to leap out and scream, Here - read this! Finger pointing and shoulder shrugging doesn't pay the bills after all. How to manage your mind, your credit, your career choice, your sexuality, your purchases, your family, your ups and downs, your manners, your work-life balance - these 30 lessons contain heirloom wisdom updated for the needs of the 21st century. E-Auntie wants to help you help yourself and revive the American Dream. Too many people, including my proud Swamp Yankee ancestors worked too hard and shed blood to see this place go to hell in a handbasket. I love America; this country is more than baseball, apple pie, and fat old guys on Harleys. It's a place founded on the notion that people should be able to wake up in the morning, feel safe, say what they want, worship how they please, and actualize their dreams with hard work. I want you to learn to think for yourselves and from there formulate your own intelligent and well-considered views on life. Don't automatically buy into whatever authorities or the popular media are telling you is right for you. It may or may not be sound. You need to cultivate your critical thinking skills and ultimately decide for yourself. It's your movie and the only meaningful script is the one you can write for yourself. Ready? Let's get started!
