

Mothers are always special, and in this book Celestine Sibley tells us why. But don't expect to find only silver-haired saints and paragons of maternal virtue in this volume. The women (and sometimes men) that Sibley writes about are honest people confronting everyday problems. They are frequently strong-willed, occasionally unorthodox, and generally free-spirited people who do the best they can with what's at hand. And they always do it with a tremendous sustaining power of love.
