

Want to get inside the mind of ISIS? What about Al Qaeda? Roy Huck lived inside a terrorist cell for months ... this is his story! Terrorist University by Nicholas Black with Roy Huck American intelligence had advance knowledge of planned Al Qaeda terrorist attacks, including the Madrid Train bombing on 3/11/2004, and did nothing to stop them. How do I know this?

Because I was a fellow prisoner and close friend of several high-ranking Al Qaeda operatives inside the high-security wing of Valdemoro Prison in Spain. This prison has a nickname. They call it, "Terrorist University." I was asked, and agreed, to participate in an intelligence gathering operation that produced this and other information. My nom de guerre from the French Foreign Legion was Jayden Roy Huck, and this is my story. WHAT you will read in the following pages may bother you. It is meant to tell the true account of a poorly run undercover operation that took place between October 2002 and June of 2003. I have kept the true names of the different individuals. However, when dealing with certain individuals who are still at-large, I chose to use only first names. This is neither an indictment nor an accusation about U.S. governmental and foreign policies when dealing with international terrorism, yet it is critical when appropriate. As the writer, I do not claim to be able to create a literary work that will be appreciated for its eloquent prose. Hey, I carried a pistol before I ever picked up a pen. You might be offended by what you read. Fair enough. It is a true story, and life is often times an offensive string of circumstances. Every conversation is as accurate as my memory will allow. Every account is verifiable through evidence in my possession. Yes, I made copies. No, I wont tell you who has them. Welcome to TERRORIST UNIVERSITY
